

JAMIE T HEADS INTO THE WC TO MAKE A SPLASH AT THE LATEST T-MOBILE STREET GIG

Now in its second year, T-Mobile Street Gigs has brought you some of the biggest and most exciting new artists including The Strokes, The Streets, Pharrell and Dirty Pretty Things to the UK's streets for a series of live gigs. The latest gig will see Jamie T going back underground to perform in an ex public convenience!!

Armed only with his acoustic bass guitar Jamie T heads back to West London to perform a very intimate gig in the most unusual of places, a converted public toilet in Shepherds Bush on Tuesday 15th August.

One man band Jamie T decided to fuse his loose folky songs, with a punk, reggae and hip hop tinge which spins from minimalist to complex and back again. He has a quintessentially eclectic London sound that has gained him a cult following. Described as a cross between The Streets and Billy Bragg, Jamie T pedals his own brand of socio-political commentary in a catchy pop format.

Jamie T said: "It's not often that you get to play in a public toilet! The location and atmosphere are great and I'm looking forward to playing there."

The only certainty with a T-Mobile Street Gig is to expect the unexpected! Recent T-Mobile Street Gigs involved The Strokes playing to dinosaurs, at the Natural History Museum, Magic Numbers playing a Casino, The Streets performing in London's only lighthouse, The Rakes rocking out a Turkish Kebab shop and Pharrell playing at a fruit market! A total of 20 bespoke T-Mobile Street Gigs are planned for 2006 and each one will be a unique entertainment experience in its own right, created by T-Mobile in order to bring music fans closer to the experiences they love.

Over the next few months, T-Mobile customers and their music fan mates will have the chance to see their favourite bands performing live in the most unusual and unexpected settings...the select crowd will always know where their Street Gigs experience starts, but they'll never know beforehand quite how it's going to end up!

Tickets are strictly by invite only. To be in with a chance of getting on the guest list for this intimate gig, music fans must register online at www.t-mobile.co.uk/street from 9am Tuesday 8th August and closes at 9am on Friday 11th August.

Transmission With T-Mobile is a hot new Friday night show on Channel 4 presented by Steve Jones and Lauren Laverne. The twelve-week series kicked off on Friday 16th June and airs at 11.30pm.
